WHY SHE LEFT THE FLAT.

She Could Submit to Snubs, but "Neighborhood" Was Too Much for Her.

They were coming down town together in a Broadway car, and the woman in the plush jacket was pouring her tale of woe into the sympathetic left ear of her neighbor in the sealskin coat.

"Yes, I've moved," she said. "We've given up flat life and are going to live in a hotel for awhile. No, it wasn't the traditional causes that drove me out, either. I'd grown used to the dumb waiter, had established fairly friendly relations with the janitor, and my servant agreed beautifully with the other servant, who washed on the same day she did."

"We had lived in the flat almost six months. No one had called, and I, being used to the ways of smaller cities, had decided that the people meant to snub me. I didn't mind it. Harry and I were very comfortable. I had mother with me part of the time, and—well, everything was lovely."

"One evening I was in the bathroom, which opened off the court. I had a severe cold in my lungs, and I confided the fact to Harry, who sat in our 'den,' further down the hall. I suppose that I must have raised my voice just a little, when Harry suggested that I use goose grease and I replied that I hadn't any in the house."

"Well, my dear, in just ten minutes the bell rang and my maid came to me with a saucer and a message from the old lady who lived in the flat above me. The saucer contained goose grease and the message was to the effect that the dear old lady had heard me express a wish, etc., and begged I would accept it."

"I was pleased. It was so sweet and nice of her that tears came to my eyes as I took the saucer and retreated into the bathroom again. The door had hardly closed when another ring, another maid, another saucer, this time from the young married woman on the top floor."

"How ungrateful I had been! How kind and truly good were all these people! My meditations were interrupted by another ring, another maid, another supply of the goose grease. The maiden lady who kept house for her brother had sent it up, and would I please rub it in well and go to bed at once. Then the Irish servant girl across the hall brought some in and gave it to the queen of my kitchen, and I had to take in and shelter two more consignments while they were exchanging the courtesies of the evening."

"All were represented before the evening was over, except that the offerings varied. The widow on the first floor said her Maria had died of a neglected cold on the lungs, and he sent me a bottle of the Consumptive Sufferer's Relief, which she had found very soothing in her last hours. A sweet old grand-mother on the second floor sent me a mustard plaster all ready for application, and the widow who boards with her contributed a box of four-grain quinine pills and a medical journal."

"Martha and I spent the entire evening receiving these neighborly offerings, while Harry sat still and chuckled. By 11 o'clock we had ample stock for a small apothecary shop."

"From that night everybody in the block regarded me as a being snatched from death by his or her remedy. I gave them all a common interest to discuss. Harry was layd in the hall, Martha was intercepted on her way to and from the closet, I myself was subjected to various medical questions by the widow, the grandmother and the young married woman on the top floor."

"I was growing thin and pale. I simply had to have a change of scene—and people. So we moved. No, I'm not exaggerating. I haven't even done the subject justice."

But the woman in the sealskin coat thought she had.—New York World.

A Barber and Poet.
Jasmin, the Gascon poet, who was also a barber, had many a strange adventure arising from the incongruity of his two professions.

At one time, when he was visiting the mayor of a French town, and had promised to give an informal recitation to the townspeople, the hour arrived and his host did not appear. Several important personages assembled to accompany him to the hall, but the mayor remained invisible, busied with his toilet.

Finally, fearing the impatience of his guests, he opened the door of his chamber to apologize, and showed his face covered with lather.

"Just a moment," said he; "I am finishing my shaving."

"Oh," said Jasmin, "let me help you!"

He at once doffed his coat, gave a finishing touch to the razor and shaved the mayor in a twinkling, with what he called his "hand of velvet." In a few minutes he was in the hall receiving tumultuous applause for his splendid recitations.—Youth's Companion.

A Warning as to Flower Beds.
Against one thing let me warn the reader, and that is the indiscriminate use of formal foliage or flower beds on most lawns. They are apt to lend a garish and vulgar air to the place. Close to the house you may sometimes use one or two of these beds, but their bright red and yellow colors should be set a little on one side and not allowed to glare at one too much. I respect the universal delight in rich color, but all formal patches of color should be used carefully and in proper relations to the whole picture.—Samuel Parsons, Jr., in Scribner's.

The American Apple in Europe.
Apples form a considerable part of our exports to Europe. They command higher prices, proportionately, than any other American fruit. Those which can be bought here for ten dollars a barrel sell for twenty-five dollars on the other side. A year ago Prince Bismarck paid thirty dollars for a barrel of Newtown pippins which would have sold here for fourteen dollars. Europeans acknowledge that in apples and several other things the United States cannot be equaled.—New York Evening Sun.

He was one of the army who are living and seeing life in New York on an attenuated income, and one cold morning he awoke to the realization that the overcoat would be a necessary part of his garb for that day. He looked at it. 'Twas unrepresentable. He thrust his hands deep into his pockets. They were empty. Two direful facts, neither of them surprises, faced him, but he was not unmoved. He proceeded cheerily to a small tailor's shop and presented the overcoat for repairs.

"It will cost you a dollar," said Shears. "The price is no obstacle, proceed," replied the customer. Shears turned the coat over to a subordinate and sat down for a chat with the heaven-sent customer, for Shears was a Spaniard. And yet he was sufficiently Americanized to produce a deck of cards and propose a little game of poker. The heaven-sent assented. Vest buttons made admirable chips, and the cards flew for some minutes, until the coat was repaired. Then the customer paid his bill in vest buttons, and received from Shears fifty cents for the remaining buttons he had won. Then, equipped for the inclement weather, he went forth conscious of the rift in the clouds, and bought for himself a luxurious fifty-cent breakfast.—New York Times.

He Is a Happy Boy at Times.

There is at least one boy in this city who is overjoyed by the news of every funeral the services of which are to be held in the church to which he is attached. He is only nine years old and is a very poor lad, the child of needy parents. He sings in the church choir, and whenever the choir is called upon to sing at a funeral he is paid the sum of one dollar for his service in it. Yesterday forenoon he rushed home to tell his mamma that there were to be two funerals in the afternoon. He laughed beyond measure as he shouted, "Good news, mamma! two funerals!" He danced and was filled with bliss over the prospect. He had not sung at a funeral for nearly a week, and had been disconsolate. His mother, too, was happy over the news, for she needed money and her husband was out of work. When the lad returned home with two dollars after the funerals the household was cheered up, and the family got a good dinner.—New York Sun.

An Anecdote of the Emir.

Mr. Pyne, an English engineer resident at Cabul, in the service of the emir, tells a good story about his highness and the Russians. Mr. Pyne is stated to have been told by the emir himself. The Russian governor of Turkestan sent to the emir saying that it was proposed to exercise some 500 artillery and cavalry on the Afghan frontier, and expressing the hope that it would not give rise to apprehensions on the part of his highness. To this his highness replied that he had no objection, because as it happened that he was about to exercise 5,000 cavalry, artillery and infantry on his side of the frontier at the same place and there was plenty of room for both. The reply to this, after thanking his highness was that another more convenient site had been found for the proposed maneuvers.—London Times.

A Man with the Supreme Humanity.

Once I was warned by a well known statesman against putting ecclesiastics on my society's committee. I said, "But we have already one on it, Cardinal Manning." His reply was, "Oh, Manning; he is not an ecclesiastic; he belongs to us all!" That the supreme humanity is king among men, this is the lesson of the great life which the nation mourns and which it will see no more.—Contemporary Review.

Stating the Case Frankly.

The servant girl answered the door-bell and replied that her mistress was out. "Please tell her," said the caller, "that I would like very much to have her come over tonight to play whist." "Well, ma'am," answered her royal highness, the servant girl, "I know Mrs. S. can't go; it's my night out, and she's got to stay in."—Springfield Homestead.

The News says P. E. Webber of White Pine is a candidate for delegate to Chicago. He has long been a wheel horse in the Democratic party, always a worker and never an office seeker, and unless the convention is stacked in the interest of some candidate that Mr. Webber is opposed to he will doubtless be chosen.

Curiosity led C. H. Stoddard to hunt for more bones in Ginoche's field, where four human skulls were found, and he succeeded in finding another large skull. The appearance of the bones indicate that they had been in the ground many years. As the Indians had no regular burying ground it is very probable that a white family had been murdered while on their way to California, and their bodies buried in a trench where those bones are found.

At the municipal elections held in Iowa, Michigan and Ohio, Monday, the Democrats were generally successful. In Kansas the Alliance and Democrats seem to work together. FLORISTON NOTES.

What is Being Said and Done up the River.

FLORISTON, California, April 4, 1932.

Two of our experienced fishermen today visited and thoroughly examined the dams around Verdi, to see if they could discover any obstructions that would prevent the fish from coming up the river during the spawning season. I am informed that the waters of the main river are diverted and let through a ditch to an old mill site. The water falls perpendicularly some eight feet and it is simply impossible for the fish to get over. True, there is a fish ladder, or an apology for one, but the gates are so high that all the water is let through the ditch and over the mill dump above referred to. There is water seeping through the walls of the dam below where the fish are numerous, and from the various accounts of the catchers of the speckled beauties not a fish can pass over this dam. I do not make any charges in particular, but feel that we have a decided grievance and a legitimate "kick" and would most respectfully call the attention of the Commissioner of the State of Nevada to this state of affairs and ask him to give this subject his immediate attention in justice to all lovers of the piscatorial sport. I know that the river has but few fish hereabouts and know that my informants have truly stated the facts. The Commissioners of this State had ladders put in at Cuba and personally watched the erection of the same to see that they were properly constructed, being assured that Nevada would do the right thing by us, and think she has tried, but the diverting of all the water from the main river, I think, is unknown to them, but after having their attention called to this hope they will have the matter investigated.

Miss Annie Estabrook and her mother are visiting Mrs. D. M. Dyant of Cuba.

There are rumors of a falling out among the ice companies, but as my information is not authentic, give it for what it is worth.

The Union Ice Company has notified the Rocky Run and the Floriston Ice Companies that it has rescinded contracts, which were to run another year, whereby the Union was to take 5,000 tons from the two other companies. The National Ice Company claim they are in to stay and as a result an ice war is raging in San Francisco, but the people on both sides deny that any "cutting" is being practiced. I understand that the Tevis Artificial Machine was to start up on the 1st of this month when an active ice cutting strike could be looked for. The National will erect another mammoth ice house here this Summer and increase the capacity of its ponds. The Floriston will tear down the old house and build on an extension of forty feet and increase the capacity of the pond. This will make times lively here.

Mason, Kipper & Company start up their mill to-morrow, expecting to run it to its full capacity, as Messrs. Simonds & Hollings have been snaking logs to the head of the chute for the last two months to be ready to run them down as soon as the mill could start.

The snow that fell during the last storm is fast disappearing.

Brakeman Kirby, who lost his arm by the cars in Truckee last St. Patrick's night, is lying in the Hospital at Sacramento in a precarious condition. His many friends along the road are greatly worried and the Brotherhood of Trainmen sent one of their members to look after his wants if he was in need. Kirby was a brakeman on the swing train for a long time.

A GOLD FAMINE IN SIGHT.

Why Gold is Disappearing From the United States.

The money-kings and bondholders of Europe have something like five billion dollars invested in bonds, mortgages and interest bearing securities in the United States. These securities are drawing an average rate of interest of not less than five per cent per annum. It takes two hundred and fifty million dollars a year to pay the interest on these securities. Owing to a divine blessing in shape of large crops in the United States and very poor crops in Europe, we were able to pay one hundred and eighty million dollars of the interest in grain, and only had to pay seventy million dollars in gold to square up the interest for the year. With normal conditions it will take but three years for the European bondholders to absorb all the gold in the United States, and the fourth year, when these bondholders make a demand for their gold interest and it is not forthcoming, owing to its non-existence, it will be in order for Europe to declare war on the United States, for the bondholders property is sacred and if necessary the interest must be collected by force of arms. Truly the situation is becoming serious, and it looks as if the gold bug bondholders in the United States were going to get a hoist by their own petard. The only thing that can prevent it, if the gold bugs remain at the helm, is the discovery of a mammoth cache filled with gold. Give the gold bugs a little more rope and their self destruction will be complete.

THE WORLD ENRICHED.

The facilities of the present day for the production of everything that will conduce to the material welfare and comfort of mankind are almost unlimited and when Syrup of Figs was first produced the world was enriched with the only perfect laxative known, as it is the only remedy which is truly pleasing and refreshing to the taste and prompt and effectual to cleanse the system; gently in the Spring time or, in fact, at any time and the better it is known the more popular it becomes.

THROW POWDER IN THE STOVE.

Petaluma, Cal., April 5.—Mrs. S. N. Adams of this city while house cleaning this afternoon by mistake threw a package of gunpowder in the stove, causing an explosion and setting her clothes on fire. Her screams soon brought help, but she was badly burned before the fire could be extinguished.

BURGERS MAKE A HAUL.

GRASS VALLEY, April 5.—This morning about 2 o'clock the residence of George Tracy, furniture dealer, was entered by burglars. Tracy's pockets were relieved of one hundred and seventy dollars.

THE NEGRO'S HUMOR.

Among the old time negroes in middle Georgia was much of a humor very interesting. Their speech, by constant contact with the white man's, which it sought to imitate, had a curtness and vivacity never heard on large seaboard and river plantations. In the lightness of the negro's heart, with an imagination that never sought to be curbed, his words and his deportment often had a fun as rare as any lover of that article reasonably could wish to see. Even his complaints, oftener than otherwise, were put forth with a resentment so peculiar as to provoke as well laughter as sympathy. Witness the following anecdote of the return to his old master, not very long ago, of one of his former slaves after having served another person for a year:

"Why, Jim, how happens it that you quit Perkins?" asked the gentleman.

"Well, now, Marsa Jack, I gwine up en tell you jes' how 't is. I wuck for dah man all las' year, and I wuck hard, on I make him a good crop. Well, now, do troof is, I did git from him a few, but min you, jes only a few, merlasses on bobarker, on one hut, on a pair o' shoes, on one little thing on nother. Well, den, Chris'us come, on hesay, 'Jim, I gwine make out onr' count.' On den he truck he piece o' paper, on he pon, on he ink vial, on he 'gin a settin' down, and when he thoo wid dat job, he 'gin a stidin' up, on a-pu'n down, on a-kyar'n; on he kyar'd, on he kep' on a-kyar'n, on twel, bless your soul on body, Marsa Jacky, when he got thoo, he done kyar's off all what was a-comin to me! En so I makes up my min, I does, to left dah, on pewcose myself back to you, whar I knows dey not gwine be no sich kyar'n as dem."

Then he joined heartily in the laugh raised by what had just occurred to him as being a good practical joke.—Colonel Richard M. Johnston in Century.

SALVATION ARMY SHELTERS IN LONDON.

The Salvation Army shelters make no claim to anything beyond decent cleanliness and comfort. Outside, the street lamps burn dimly through the fog. It is bright and light within. Outside, the wind cuts pitilessly through the thin garments. The Shelter is always warm. Outside, the clothing bears too often the mark of the gutter mud. It is always possible to "wash and be clean" within, for hot water and soap and towels are for use of the inmates without extra charge.

The women desiring lodgings may come in as early in the afternoon as they will. Many do come early and sit about and mend their tatters and gossip a bit, taking their bowl of soup or mug of cocoa with as much true neighborliness as enters in other hospitable quarters into the makeshift of afternoon tea.

Rarely is there heard, either in the Women's or Men's Shelter, the sound of quarrels or ribald talk. Those in charge report but little difficulty in governing an element that in the streets and alleys would be almost beyond control.

The warm room, the comfortable meal, the sense of shelter and respite from wandering, all have their quieting influence. And when we add that every evening the Shelters are made the centers of an active religious meeting, we realize that the inmates are not left to the depression or the excitement of their own discouraged thoughts.—Mary Lowe Dickinson in Harper's Bazar.

FASHION NOTES.

A flannel night-gown is recommended for travelers.

Jeweled buckles are appearing on beauty's head-gear.

Some new gowns have a cascade of lace from collar to hem.

The bell-crowned top hat is ringing at fashion's door again.

The "scavenger skirt" is what the demitrain has been dubbed.

Gold gloves are made to match gold shoes, but they are not popular.

A new bracelet is composed of ribbon with a magnificent gold buckle.

The Parisian maiden is now wearing a tassel on her house slippers.

Embroidery will be in high favor on all dressy and semi-dressy costumes.

The fad is now to make some Lenten presentation to your church or minister.

Just now the feminine fancy runs to belts. But a conspicuous belt should not be worn around a big waist.

A "progressive dinner" is a Lenten diversion, where the meal is served on small tables, accommodating four, and at each course the gentlemen change tables.

The old saying that fashion is like a wheel which turns around, is again emphasized by the assurance that we are to see a most marked revival of black silk.

AN AUSTIN FRANK.

Austin has a frank in the shape of an animal, which is half donkey and half calf. The Reveille says the monstrosity has but one body, on which are attached nine legs, six of which it uses in walking and three are hanging, apparently lifeless; two from the chest and one from the swell of the stomach. Its gait is shambling, but firm, and apparently gives but little inconvenience.

EYES AND EARS OPEN.

And you will see and hear many things to your advantage. With open eyes you cannot fail to see the advertisement of Simmons' Liver Regulator, and with ears open you will constantly hear of the relief it gives millions who suffer with indigestion, dyspepsia, constipation or biliousness. A dose now and then and you'll not know anything about malaria, that miserable, tired-out feeling.

"August Flower"

The Hon. J. W. Fennimore is the Sheriff of Kent Co., Del., and lives at Dover, the County Seat and Capital of the State. The sheriff is a gentleman fifty-nine years of age, and this is what he says: "I have used your August Flower for several years in my family and for my own use, and found it does me more good than any other remedy. I have been troubled with what I call Sick Headache. A pain comes in the back part of my head first, and then soon a general headache until I become sick and vomit. At times, too, I have a fullness after eating, a pressure after eating at the pit of the stomach, and sourness, when food seemed to rise up in my throat and mouth. When I feel this coming on if I take a little August Flower it relieves me, and is the best remedy I have ever taken for it. For this reason I take it and recommend it to others as a great remedy for Dyspepsia, &c."

WIVES SOLD CHEAP.

LOVELY MAIDS OF NEW GUINEA BOUGHT FOR AN AX PIECE.

Adventure of an American Scientist Among the Papuans—How a Brave Native Lover Earned a Spouse—A Pressing Invitation to Marry.

Such opportunities for matrimony as were offered me in New Guinea a few years ago I never expect to enjoy again. My journey through the island of the Papuans was made for the purpose of collecting specimens of all sorts, such as a naturalist seeks to gather, but the people themselves are the most interesting specimens I have ever met. The men and children go about entirely naked, while the women wear only short grass petticoats. I employed a young black fellow named Raim to help me in my work. His hair was a bush of kinky fuzz and stood up on his head in a mass as big as a half bushel measure. I found out that he was in love, but he admitted with a sigh that he was too poor to marry the girl of his choice.

"You are young and strong," said I. "Why do you not go to work and earn enough to support yourself and your sweetheart?"

"You do not understand," he replied. "I have a good garden that would supply what food we wanted; besides, I can throw the spear further and truer to the mark than any other man in this district, so that I can get plenty of kangaroos and pigs. But they will not buy the girl. Her mother wants an ax for her, and that I cannot give in my garden or hunt in the forest with my spear."

The poor fellow groaned, made several despairing remarks on his prospective mother-in-law, and finally said that if he did not love the young woman so dearly he would go away and never come back again.

HELPING A NATIVE TO MARRY.

"But, my boy, you need not despair," said I. "If the possession of an ax will secure your happiness I will give you one. I want my paradise bird, for in my country people think more of them than of axes. If you will help me get as many birds with the long plumes as you have fingers on both hands you shall have an ax on the day we get the last one."

He accepted this proposition delightfully. At length, with his assistance, the ten good birds were procured and the ax earned. I was present when they bought his wife with it. They were married the following evening, the ceremony being concluded with a wild dance and singing by a chorus of girls.

As we were preparing our dinner one afternoon a titter and a giggle were welcomed to our ears. Looking around we beheld Lohier in the midst of a group of fifteen or twenty girls, many of them of superior beauty, who were laughing and peering at us over each other's shoulders. They all wore flowers in their hair and bands of green leaves adorned their arms and ankles. Each maiden had on her best striped petticoat and some wore necklaces of dog's teeth.

At length Lohier, one of my recent captives, stepping forward, said that he had been a long way, had visited the biggest towns of his country and had brought back with him the most beautiful women of his nation. He hoped we would each select one that would please us, marry her and settle down in New Guinea. The parents of some of the girls had come also and were standing in the background. Our friend explained to us that the prices were high, as they were the finest girls in the land.

LINGER FOR PROPOSALS.

He arranged them all in a giggling line, that they might be seen to the best advantage. Beginning with the first, he told their names and gave their different accomplishments.

I noticed a beautiful girl whom I had met while out shooting in the mountains of my native land. I was anxious to hear what Lohier would say of her. She still wore the string of beads I had given her, and looked as pretty and modest as a virgin. When he came to her he said:

"This is Lucena. Is she not lovely? Her arms are round as bamboo; her form is supple as the climbing vine; her skin is smooth as a young banana leaf; her hair is soft as spiders' webs; her eyes are bright as dew in the morning. She can sing like a bird and run fast as a kangaroo; she is a good housekeeper, an affectionate daughter and comes from a good family, for her father is a great warrior."

The value set upon the beauty was an ax, a knife, a piece of calico and a string of beads. We stood admiring her, and Lohier thought he had made a bargain. We realized that the affair might turn out seriously, perhaps, but we turned the matter off by declaring that we were unable to make a choice among so many lovely creatures and proceeding to distribute presents liberally. To most of the girls we gave gay colored handkerchiefs, with a brass ring and a brass button in each. To Lucena we offered a looking glass, and the young woman danced for our amusement while we ate our dinner, and sang a song, which they composed as they went along, describing the whole scene and complimenting us upon our generosity. Toward evening they bade us goodly and started for their homes.—Fish Commissioner Sherman F. Denton in Washington Star.

RED BURY, Sept. 25, 1901.

Metropolitan Dispensary, Washoe County, Nevada. SIX weeks ago, when I first wrote you, I did not think it possible that such a wonderful change could be wrought in such a case as mine. I was a victim of Nervous Debility and Insomnia, caused by my own indiscretion. I was unable to sleep soundly for three and four days on a stretch, and the only sleep I had been dozing for months, and the best physicians on the coast pronounced my case hopeless. I was dying, dying slowly but surely, yet able to be up and around. Your first treatment was a revelation to me, and in a short time was fast asleep, and after 24 hours I felt certain that you would cure me. I have gained more than 20 lbs. in six weeks. I can only say "God bless you."

W. W. WILSON

Miss Nellie Wilson of Watsonville, Cal. writes us as follows:

I have been troubled for some time with the balance due you. It is unnecessary to send another testimonial, as I am entirely cured.

MISS NELLIE WILSON.

Mother says that I'm well, and I quite agree with her. My hearing is completely restored, the ringing noises in my right ear are also gone.

I have gained 15 pounds of weight in the two months of your treatment. My sound of small has also returned, although it was about gone, as you will remember.

MISS NELLIE WILSON.

Such evidence as this, coming from respectable parties, cannot be ignored by the afflicted. Who would be glad to have you write to these parties and see for yourselves. We have thousands of similar testimonials on file in our office.

The Metropolitan Dispensary has a full staff of 10 physicians, graduates of the best American and European colleges. Each department is presided over by an eminent specialist.

A Remarkable Man.

A strange story is told of a contractor of Chicago. While at work he sweats and drinks like a good fellow, or rather bad fellow, but as soon as he has reached his home and donned his feminine attire he is a changed man. He is not a man; he is a woman—so far as dress and manners can make one. He puts on corsets and form improvers, shaves and powders his face, pierces his big red ears and inserts in them great golden earrings. He has spent much of his earnings for gaudy ball dresses and evening wardrobes; spent his time and wealth in dressing himself up in the height of the feminine fashion, in compressing his waist, in shortening his steps, in whitening his hands and face, in learning womanly graces, poses, foibles. He is a strong man—a man who has done manual labor almost all his life, a man who can outclimb, outwrestle, outdrink and outrun ninety-nine men out of a hundred of his neighbors. He is said to be worth $100,000.—New York Tribune.

A Remarkable Man.

A strange story is told of a contractor of Chicago. While at work he sweats and drinks like a good fellow, or rather bad fellow, but as soon as he has reached his home and donned his feminine attire he is a changed man. He is not a man; he is a woman—so far as dress and manners can make one. He puts on corsets and form improvers, shaves and powders his face, pierces his big red ears and inserts in them great golden earrings. He has spent much of his earnings for gaudy ball dresses and evening wardrobes; spent his time and wealth in dressing himself up in the height of the feminine fashion, in compressing his waist, in shortening his steps, in whitening his hands and face, in learning womanly graces, poses, foibles. He is a strong man—a man who has done manual labor almost all his life, a man who can outclimb, outwrestle, outdrink and outrun ninety-nine men out of a hundred of his neighbors. He is said to be worth $100,000.—New York Tribune.
